	Structure
Overall	I wrote a story of an important moment. It read like a story, even though it might be a true account.
Lead	I wrote a beginning in which I not only showed what was happening and where, but also gave some clues to what would later become a problem for the main character.
Transitions	I used transitional phrases to show passage of time in complicated ways, perhaps by showing things happening at the same time (meanwhile , at the same time) or flashback and flash-forward (early that morning , three hours later).
Ending	I wrote an ending that connected to the main part of the story. The character said, did, or realized something at the end that came from what happened in the story.
	I gave readers a sense of closure.
Organization	I used paragraphs to separate different parts or time of the story and to show when a new character was speaking. Some parts of the story were longer and more developed than others.
	Development
Elaboration	I developed characters, setting, and plot throughout my story, especially the heart of the story. To do this, I used a blend of description, action, dialogue, and thinking.
Craft	I showed why characters did what they did by including their thinking and their responses to what happened.
	I slowed down the heart of the story. I made less important parts shorter and less detailed and blended storytelling and summary as needed.
	I included precise details and used figurative language so that readers could picture the setting, characters, and events. I used some objects or actions as symbols to bring forth my meaning.
	I varied my sentences to create the pace and tone of my narrative.
	Language Conventions
Spelling	I used what I knew about word families and spelling rules to help me spell and edit. I used the word wall and dictionaries when needed.

Name:

I used commas to set off introductory parts of sentences, such as One day at the park,

I went on the slide; I also used commas to show talking directly to someone, such as

Punctuation

Are you mad, Mom?
